Instrument in commercial development...
PROF GETS $240,000 NSF GRANT FOR NON-DESTRUCTIVE APPROACH TO ARCHEOLOGY

Rinita Dalan, an MSUM Anthropology and Earth Sciences professor, has received a $240,000 grant from the National Science Foundation to develop an innovative and non-destructive approach to study the nation's cultural resources.

The intent is to wed two scientific methods of peering underground while doing as little damage to the surface as possible, a technique that will help archeologists discover and map the buried past without destroying it.

The grant stems from an instrument Dalan developed in concert with Bartington Instruments in London called a down-hole magnetic susceptibility probe.

The device measures variations in magnetic properties of subsurface soils to a depth of nine to ten feet. Increased magnetism in the soil, Dalan said, may indicate a former site of human activity or an old land surface.

The magnetic properties, she said, tend to increase with age and human activity because of resulting chemical and biological changes.

The down-hole probe is portable and lightweight, allowing archaeologists to quickly survey potential sites cheaply and without disturbing the environment.

"Instead of digging or excavating," Dalan said, "you just use a hand-held corer to make a hole in the soil and insert an instrument down the cavity to test for magnetic susceptibility."

What's new about this NSF grant, however, is that it will allow Dalan to link the newly expanding field of environmental magnetism with traditional field and laboratory archeological techniques that are increasingly becoming computerized.

The result: a comprehensive soil magnetic laboratory, the first in the country, she said, dedicated to archeological applications.

Much of the grant will be used to purchase equipment for the new laboratory, including software to map and produce visual models of the subterranean landscape.

One promising use for this approach is identifying cemeteries and unmarked graves, especially for Native American groups concerned about disturbing these sites. MSUM has already received another $30,000 grant from the National Park Service to find unmarked graves in several Midwestern states.

Other applications include studying ancient settlements and land surfaces buried under soil, and using the data to map other similar sites.

This new combined geophysical approach will be incorporated into the National Park Service's annual training for a variety of professionals ranging from university archeologists and federal and state agencies to Native American environmentalists and cultural resource management firms.

Also, this new soil magnetic laboratory will be used by hundreds of MSUM and Tri-College University students for undergraduate research.

Meanwhile, Bartington Instruments, who worked with Dalan in engineering and manufacturing the down-hole probe, has just released for sale its first commercial version of the probe on its Web site: www.bartington.com. It includes free software developed by Kim Humble, a recent MSUM graduate.

PROF NAMED TO STATE BOARD OF AGING

Sue Humphers-Ginther, an MSUM Sociology professor and coordinator of the university's Gerontology major, was named by Gov. Tim Pawlenty to the Minnesota Board of Aging.

The MBA is the gateway to services for seniors and their families. It listens to senior concerns, researches solutions and proposes policy to address senior needs.

The 25-member board administers funds from the Older Americans Act that provides a spectrum of services to seniors, including more than $20 million in federal funds and an additional $6 million in state funds annually. It also designates a statewide network of multi-county Area Agencies on Aging, which leverages an additional $17 million in local dollars and resources, ensuring local input and accountability.

A faculty member with MSUM's Sociology and Criminal Justice department for seven years, Humphers-Ginther is a specialist in the sociology of aging. She's a member of several committees and boards focusing on aging, including the Advisory Council for the Retired Senior and Volunteer Program, the Advisory Council for the Senior Companion Program, the Leadership Council for the Alzheimer's Association of Minnesota-North Dakota and the Advisory Board for the North Star Regional Geriatrics in Education Center.

She's also a member of the planning committee for the Northern Plains Conference on Aging that takes place in Fargo each fall (scheduled Sept. 14-16 at the Holiday Inn this year) and a member of the Coalition of Service Providers to the Elderly.

Humphers-Ginther will serve a four-year term on the MBA, which was established in 1956 as the Governor's Council on Aging. It is the third oldest state agency on aging in the United States.

MSUM STUDENTS WIN THREE NATIONAL JOURNALISM AWARDS

MSUM had three national winners in the Society of Professional Journalists Mark of Excellence Awards program announced this summer.

Lee Rieber, an MSUM senior, won the top national award in the Television News Photography category for a feature story he did for WDAY-TV called "Snowmobile Patrol." He's originally from Perham, Minn., where he graduated from high school in 2001.

Rieber

Ashley Thornberg, who also graduated from MSUM this spring, was a national finalist in the Online Features Reporting category. She's originally from Walhalla, N.D., where she graduated from high school in 2001. And MSUM's Horizonlines was a national finalist in the Best All-Around Independent Online Student Publication category. Horizonlines is an on-line magazine focusing on the F-M community produced by MSUM students. It can be seen at www.horizonlines.org.

College journalists submitted more than 3,000 entries in 45 categories for the national competition.

The Society of Professional Journalists is the nation's most broad-based journalism organization, dedicated to encouraging the free practice of journalism, inspiring and educating the next generation of journalists and stimulating high ethical standards in the profession.

The winners of the SPJ Mark of Excellence awards represent the best in college journalism.

The national winners were previously recognized by receiving first place in one of the 12 of the Society's regional competitions. They'll be recognized during an awards luncheon in Las Vegas this fall.

ART EXHIBIT FEATURES AREA HIGH SCHOOL ART EDUCATORS

More than 40 area high school art teachers will be featured in an art exhibit that runs Aug. 22-Sept. 7 in the Roland Dille Center for the Arts Gallery. A reception for the artists will be held Saturday, Aug. 27 from 2-4 p.m. in the gallery. The exhibit and reception are free and open to the public.

More than 1,000 art educators from Minnesota, North Dakota and South Dakota were invited to the first ever tri-state exhibition. Titled "Six by Six," the show will include 2D pieces that are no larger than 6 inches by 6 inches and 3D pieces that are no larger than 6 inches by 6 inches by 6 inches. Art processes may include painting, printmaking, photography, drawing, graphic design, ceramics, sculpture, mixed media, fiber arts and jewelry.

Gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

FIVE MSUM STUDENTS GET JAPANESE GOVERNMENT SCHOLARSHIPS

Five MSUM students studying in Japan this year have been awarded Japanese Government Scholarships.

Kari Hager, Brandt Johnson, Brian Card, and Anna Hommadova received $8,000 scholarships for their full year study.

Dian Fricke received $4,000 for her one semester study.

MISCELLANEA

* Lee Garth Vigilant, Sociology and Criminal Justice, had the second article in his trilogy on addiction recovery "'I Don't Have Another Run Left With It': Ontological Security in Illness Narratives of Recovering on Methadone Maintenance" published in the journal Deviant Behavior, Vol. 26, No. 5 (Sept.-Oct. 2005): 399-416.

* Winter break: Dec. 16-Jan 10.

DALE CARNEGIE TRAINING BEGINS SEPT. 21 AT MSU MOORHEAD

MSUM will host a 12-week Dale Carnegie course beginning Sept. 21. The training meets Wednesdays from 1:30-5 p.m. in MSUM's Comstock Memorial Union.

The results-oriented course focuses on improving self-confidence, strengthening business and personal relationships, controlling stress and worry, and enhancing leadership and communication skills.

'Practice Makes Permanent' describes the Dale Carnegie teaching methodology. After identifying breakthrough goals and vision, participants will make weekly progress toward achieving them.

Dale Carnegie training is taught by certified trainers from Eide Bailly who demonstrate energy, enthusiasm and excellence in their facilitation of the course.

For more information on this Dale Carnegie course, contact: MSUM Customized Training Coordinator Kathleen Paulson at 218.477.5051 or paulsonk@mnstate.edu.

PHYSICS & ASTRONOMY KICKS OFF ITS WEEKLY SEMINAR SERIES THIS FRIDAY

The Physics and Astronomy department will kick off its weekly seminar series with a talk by Bridger Anderson, a former student, who spent the summer as an intern at the National Institute for Science and Technology (NIST). His talk, "Contact Potential Difference Measurements of Self Assembled Monolayers," will describe his work at NIST using an atomic force microscope to study the surface properties of materials. The talk will be at 3 p.m. Friday, Aug 26, in the department, King Hall 2nd floor.
